Viticulture

These vines are grown on slopes at an altitude of between 350-400 meters. The vineyard's vines consist of 60% Touriga Nacional, 20% Tinta Roriz, 10% Jaen and 10% Alfrocheiro. The vine is grown within a program of integrated protection. Infestation control is carried out through soil movement. Grape-picking is done by hand, caste by caste, when they reach the ideal point of ripeness, normally between the second fortnight of September and the first fortnight in October. The harvest is placed in small 10 kg boxes.

Systematisation

Vertical cane with 2 fixed wires and 2 moveable wires, a density of 6060 plants pruned in double guyot.

Tasting Notes

Ruby colour. Black fruit, concentrated, vigorous and very lingering. The mouth maintains the trace of modernism with quite a lot of structure, expressiveness and complexity, in a notable blend of power and elegance.
